Putting the WOW in bao

We love our social media at RedEye, and we try to keep it fun. Just ask the five contestants vying for three prizes, including a private party for 50 at Wow Bao. In RedEye's Put the WOW in Bao contest, our finalists need to show us how they'd—you guessed it—put the "wow" in those pillowy pockets filled with sweet or savory goodness. Melissa plans a song and video, Jamie is doing a photo project, Akil has a whole dance routine lined up, Vee is thinking costumes plus karaoke and Benedict is going to rap. Follow the journey and root for your favorite at bit.ly/baofinals.

Coffee shop art directors dole out grande shots of local culture with your cup o' joe

By John Lendman

FOR REDEYE

Phillip Tadros, 31, is an up-and-coming local art curator, but he doesn't own a gallery.

At least, not a traditional gallery.

Kickstand Espresso Bar, a Lakeview coffee shop-slash-informal gallery space that's on the front lines of Chicago's established-yet-growing shop gallery scene, is Tadros' fifth shop in Chicago. And as at his other locations, including Dollop Coffee Co. in Uptown, Tadros looked to local artists to populate Kickstand's walls. That's how he reconnected with Chicago artist Jason Fennell, 31, aka "Homeless Cop."

"I was totally in the right place at the right time," Fennell said.

Years ago, Tadros spotted one of Fennell's designs on a T-shirt and searched everywhere for it, only to have Fennell approach him this summer when Kickstand was slated to open.

Since the cafe opened in June, seven of Fennell's 14 paintings have sold and he's working with Tadros, who also runs a multimedia development agency, to transform his boxy cartoon art into a series aimed for Cartoon Network's Adult Swim.

"I'm kind of living the dream," said Fennell, whose paintings range anywhere from $200-$750, depending on size. "I'm selling my artwork to pay the bills. [Tadros] has been a total guardian angel."

It's worked out for Tadros too. Columbia College, his alma mater, recognized Tadros' close ties to the artist community and contracted him last month to open three mini-coffee shops on campus.

Many artist-curator relationships aren't as lucrative and though the concept of coffee shops as alternative gallery spaces isn't new in Chicago, lately it's become more popular, said Chicago Artist Coalition executive director Carolina Jayaram, who oversees the CAC's exhibition activities within traditional and nontraditional galleries.

In the past few years especially, coffee shop galleries have grown not only in volume but in quality, said Jayaram, who has worked locally with Argo Tea Cafe, local chain Orange and Dunlays on the Square to help connect owners to local artists' work.

But there's something else spurring on the trend. Perhaps due to the recession, artists are becoming more entrepreneurial, seeking out local businesses for representation or creating their own apartment galleries.

"Artists in Chicago really take charge of their own career," Jayaram said. "They think of themselves as a small business."

So how much do artists pay to show their stuff in coffee shops?

In many cases nothing. The CAC takes a commission for exhibiting artists in appropriate venues and publicizing their work, but coffee shops working independently with artists usually don't take a cut of the sales. It's a draw for artists to display in these shops and a win-win for business owners, who get unique decor for free.

"It not only helps the artist, but it keeps the price points of the art down," said Jeff Stella, 50, co-owner and creative director of Filter, which reopened in March in Wicker Park. "And it makes art more accessible to the community."

The downside of showing in coffee shops instead of traditional galleries? Amateur artist stigma, said Kerry Couch, 25, art director and co-owner of the new Cafe Mustache in Logan Square. That and collateral damage

Beyond galleries

Restaurants join coffee shops on the local art bandwagon

Supporting Chicago's art scene is as easy as looking up from your burger or vodka-tonic at these four bars and dining destinations, whose walls are populated with pieces from Chicago artists.

Lula Cafe

2537 N. Kedzie Blvd. 773-489-9554

At this Logan Square hot spot, two curators handle four themed shows a year, including its current exhibit, displayed through the month.

Three Peas Art Lounge

75 E. 16th St.
312-624-9414

Six artists a year get two-month exhibitions at this South Loop gallery-lounge. They're also tapped to design logos for Three Peas' house wine (above). See the latest show, Crown of the Metropolis by Hebru Brantley, which opened Friday.

Estrella Negra

2346 W. Fullerton Ave. 773-227-5993

Local artists tend to flock to this BYOB restaurant-gallery anyway, so it only made sense to display their work. Other pieces come from family members and even staffers.

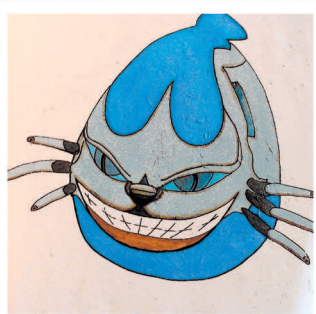

Nana

3267 S. Halsted St. 312-929-2486

This neighborhood-focused organic eatery currently displays work by a Bridgeport painter and plans to dedicate space to rotating artists from the 'hood. -LISA BALDE, LBALDE@TRIBUNE.COM caused by heavy traffic—such as the small black mark Fennell found on one of his pieces at Kickstand. Still, the exposure is a major benefit. Shops' hours also are longer than those of galleries and a new audience is gained that wouldn't otherwise have been exposed to the work.

"It's not just art aficionados and people from the art world that come in here," said Couch, who graduated from the School of the Art Institute. "So there's a lot of new exposure here."

That means coffee shops aren't hurting for artist submissions.

Take artist Donte Mearon, 32, who co-owns art and gift shop Spare Parts in Lakeview. He's been showing his work in coffee shops and restaurants all over Lakeview for years. It's his preferred venue.

So when Senem's Coffee and Tea House opened in Lakeview in July, Mearon approached owner Senem Akturk with the coffee shop gallery idea.

"I wasn't even thinking about the idea," Akturk said. "But when I was looking for design ideas for the walls ... he came in, offered [his work] and now it gets a lot of attention."

"People stick around in a coffee shop longer," Mearon said. "And it's cool to see art without the art gallery stuffiness—it's more of an experience ... and a community."

The exhilarating superhero saga "Iron Man 2" leads this week's lineup of Blu-ray releases, but the original "King Kong" never has looked better than it does on its Blu-ray book release.

In "Iron Man 2," Robert Downey Jr. returns in the role of Tony Stark, whose ego has taken hold as he claims to have achieved world peace thanks to his superhero deeds.

He receives a jolt of reality in the form of supervillain Whiplash (Mickey Rourke). Their first encounter on a racetrack is a memorable one. Not to worry. With the help of his friends Pepper Potts (Gwyneth Paltrow) and Lt. Col. James "Rhodey" Rhodes (Don Cheadle), Stark bounces back in time for a spectacular climatic battle. Also on hand are Nick Fury (Samuel L. Jackson) and the Black Widow (Scarlett Johansson), who proves she can handle herself in any situation.

"Iron Man 2," based on the Marvel comic book, delivers an action-packed piece of entertainment as promised. The release includes a standard DVD version and digital copy.

Nearly 80 years after its initial release, "King Kong" remains a marvel of filmmaking and a lasting tribute to special-effects pioneer Willis O'Brien. Using the time-consuming stop-motion animation method, O'Brien brought to life the mighty Kong complete with personality.

Once showman Carl Denham (Robert Armstrong) and his party land on Skull Island, the film moves with a breathless speed that does not stop until the Empire State Building finale. And, of course, Fay Wray as Ann Darrow has become a part of Americana.

Holdin' On, acoustic version

Rooney; watch on YouTube

Rooney has been busy this summer on tour for the self-released "Eureka," their third full-length album of sunny California pop with AM radio melodies and harmonies. "Holdin' On" leads off from that album, and here the band gives us an exclusive behind-the-scenes glimpse of their touring life, busking their way through the tune on their bus. The spare acoustic arrangement is rather nice, putting those harmonies front and center. SARAH ZUPKO, POPMATTERS

Emma Donoghue

Don't think that a book written from the perspective of a 5-year-old boy won't be riveting. Emma Donoghue captures readers with a story that is so disturbing and compelling, it's difficult to put down. The narrator, Jack, never has seen the world outside the sound-proof shed in which he and his mother are imprisoned by the kidnapper who raped her and fathered Jack. "Room" will leave you thinking about it long after you turn the last page. AMANDA ST. AMAND, ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

TV

Law & Order: UK

9:30 p.m. Sunday, BBC America

As if NBC weren't cranking out enough versions of this long-running legal series ("Law & Order: L.A." debuted Wednesday), BBC America is getting in on the action. I've always said everything is better with a British accent (and bacon, but that's another story). Here, scripts from the original "L&O" are adapted to fit the British legal system, putting a fresh spin on the series. It's also fun to hear "Battlestar Galactica" vet Jamie Bamber speak in his native accent. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

ALBUM

Hemingway's Whiskey

Kenny Chesney

Kenny Chesney offers plenty of the good-time anthems fans love ("Coastal," "Live a Little"), serves up touching ballads ("You and Tequila," "Where I Grew Up") and still takes artistic risks on his latest album. "The Boys of Fall," a 6-minute epic ode to football, is a strange success, as is his George Jones duet on "Small, Y'all." His experimentation goes a bit far on "Somewhere With You" and "Seven Days," but the energy has helped Chesney recharge, making "Hemingway's Whiskey" his best album since "When the Sun Goes Down." GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

American Dad

8:30 p.m. Sunday, Fox

Seth MacFarlane and the Smith family celebrate 100 episodes with the Season 6 premiere, "100 A.D. Part 1." Stan freaks out when Hayley and her old boyfriend, Jeff, elope. He offers a reward to anyone who can stop them, setting off a chase that allows MacFarlane to bring back dozens of characters, such as Reginald, Bullock, Roger and Steve. It's an OK episode, but not a great one. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Work it like Ginsberg

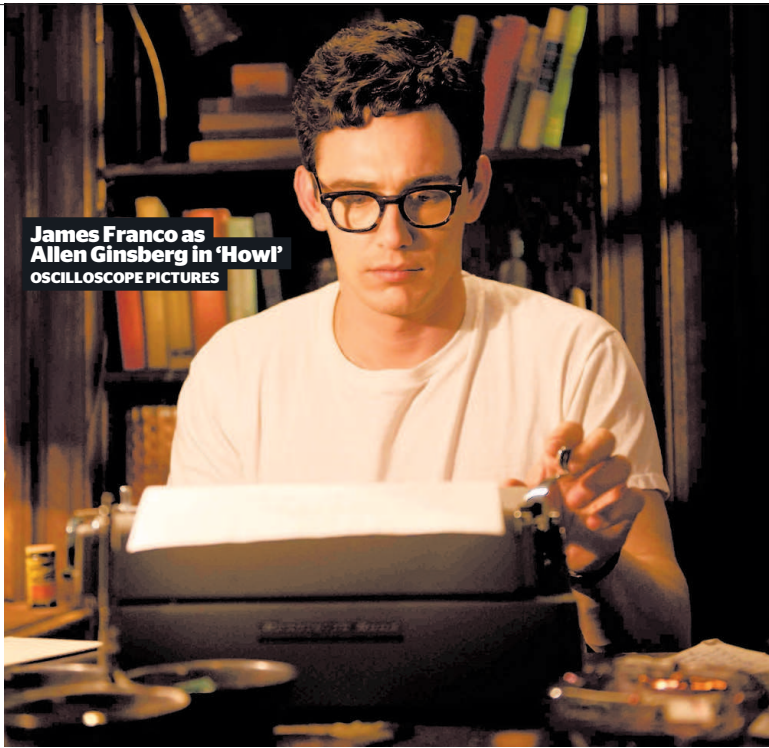

The jazzy groove and controversial language of the so-called beat generation hits the courtrooms as Allen Ginsberg's (James Franco) banned poem "Howl" is taken to task as potential obscenity. The film volleys between the 1957 trial, in color, and black-and-white scenes of Ginsberg writing and performing to enthralled bar and coffeehouse audiences in 1955.

The buzz: Finally Franco, soon to be seen as mountain climber Aron Ralston in Danny Boyle's "127 Hours," has the shot he deserves at being a leading man. He convincingly immerses in Ginsberg's nasal, rhythmic stream of consciousness that sometimes gives way to wheezing exhaustion. The film's use of animation to visualize Ginsberg's poems at times recalls, at least conceptually, the psychological ruminations of Richard Linklater's

"A Scanner Darkly" and "Waking Life."

The verdict: If you can't get down with Ginsberg's sprawling feast of hypersexual metaphors, man, you won't jive with "Howl," which presents the controversial poet's words as a brain seductively and fearlessly dancing on the page. Writers-directors Rob Epstein and Jeffrey Friedman lose sight of public outcry in the matter. The trial, featuring capable turns by David Strathairn for the prosecution and Jon Hamm for the defense, also serves as interesting history without much tension or dramatic momentum. What resonates: the politically charged debate over "literary merit" and the freedom of writing something you think no one will ever see.

C. TAYLOR CROTHERS

By Carol Hilker

FOR REDEYE

Les Claypool does not consider himself strange.

"It sort of depends on where you are coming from," the Primus frontman says. "Compared to everything I have been into in my life—music and all aspects of creativity—I am pretty tame. But I think if what's considered normal in this country is what we're seeing with Sarah Palin, then God bless my weirdness. Then I am very into being weird."

Weird or not, Claypool and his band will bring a "freak show like no other" to the Congress Theater on Saturday with a wacky traveling music fest, appropriately named The Oddity Faire. The fest, in its second year, will reunite the musical meanderings of the original Primus lineup of Claypool, guitarist Larry LaLonde and drummer Jay Lane.

RedEye spoke with Les Claypool by phone this week to get his musings on Oddity Faire, stage masks and whether he really is a weird guy.

CAROL HILKER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

What comes to mind when you think of Chicago?

I think of the Aragon Ballroom. I'd say it's one of my favorite venues in the country. It's a little seedy sometimes, but there's a vibe to that place that I just really like.

What will be the most bizarre band at Oddity Faire?

There is no one on the planet weirder than me. Although I believe weird is subjective, and it depends on your definition of weird.

So when someone says you are the weirdest guy in music, you think that's a true statement?

No. I think it sort of depends on your perspective. If you are coming from a homogenized or mainstream perspective, I might seem pretty out there.

Primus

With Portugal, The Man, Split Lip Rayfield

When: 7:30 p.m.

Saturday

Where: Congress Theater, 2135 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Tickets: $40 at congressticketing.com

What is your muse for your songwriting? How do you get to such an abstract place to think of such original characters and songs?

It depends on what it is. I have never been really good at getting on the soapbox. I do like to voice perspectives and opinions—whether they are mine or the observations of someone else—via these characters throughout my music, and these characters tend to be just characters. There are a lot of surprisingly dark elements throughout my lyrics. One big topic that tends to get focused on more than I would like is the subject of substance abuse. There tends to be these colorful yet tragic characters because I have seen that a lot in my family. People that are really amazing people, humorous people that just have this element to them that—this element of tragedy to them.

What would you consider the most normal thing about you?

I watch "Survivor." Is that normal? By the way, I should tell you that I am naked right now.

Just another normal day, huh?

It's not a weird thing or a sexual thing, I just was about to get in the shower and remembered that I had to call you.

A taste of Cuba

By Lisa Arnett

For those Saturday mornings when you've grown tired of the diner brunch, the cutesy-trendy brunch and the college football sports-bar brunch, allow us to introduce you to another option: the hearty Cuban breakfast. In the Logan Square storefront previously occupied by sandwich shop the Brown Sack, you'll find the new, small-but-bright Laguardia's Cuban Bistro. If you've been to Cafe Laguardia in Bucktown, you may recognize some of the flavors and faces. While Carlos Laguardia runs Cafe Laguardia, his brother chef Jorge and son Jorge Laguardia, Jr. run the show here, harkening back to their father's recipes from his homeland for inspiration.

This is how you do it: Claim your table and take a look at the menu, then head up to the mosaic-tile counter to order and pay. A server will bring out your piping hot food as it's ready.

The vibe: A massive mural of a Cuban streetscape and wrought-iron bistro tables evoke the feeling of an outdoor cafe, though the latter doesn't make for especially comfortable seating.

We can't stop thinking about: The Cuban scrambled eggs ($6.95), studded with chorizo, ham, shrimp, potatoes, onion, cheddar cheese and green peppers. It's a favorite of chef Jorge's for its combination of salty, smoky, bitter and sweet flavors.

For big appetites: The steak and fried eggs ($8.25) features a thin slab of beef marinated with a family recipe of Caribbean spices, heady with notes of garlic and citrus. The equally large El Caballo Cubano ($6.50) is two fried eggs with rice, black beans, seasoned ground beef and sweet fried plantains, a dish that chef Jorge's father served in his own small restaurant in Bairoa, Cuba. Straying outside Cuba's borders is huevos rancheros ($6), a bed of rice saddled with fried eggs topped with enchilada sauce and cheddar cheese, served with buttered bread for sopping up the saucy, yolky remains.

Is it lunch time yet? Veggie or chorizo omelets stuffed between crusty bread ($5-$6) make for hearty morning sandwiches. That's as lunchy as it gets until the official lunch and dinner hours, when chef Jorge cooks up specialties such as tender oxtail or boliche, a chorizo-stuffed pot roast with red wine-tomato sauce.

Day drinking: Until the cafe receives its license later this season to serve wine and beer, it's BYOB, though no one's really boozing it up here during breakfast. Instead, cans of mango juice and paper cups of cafe con leche maintain the street-side feel.

Crowd surfing: A rapid rotation of hungry friends, couples and parents with kids.

Latest 'NBA Jam' video game missing handful of Bulls' best showmen

By Ryan Smith

FOR REDEYE

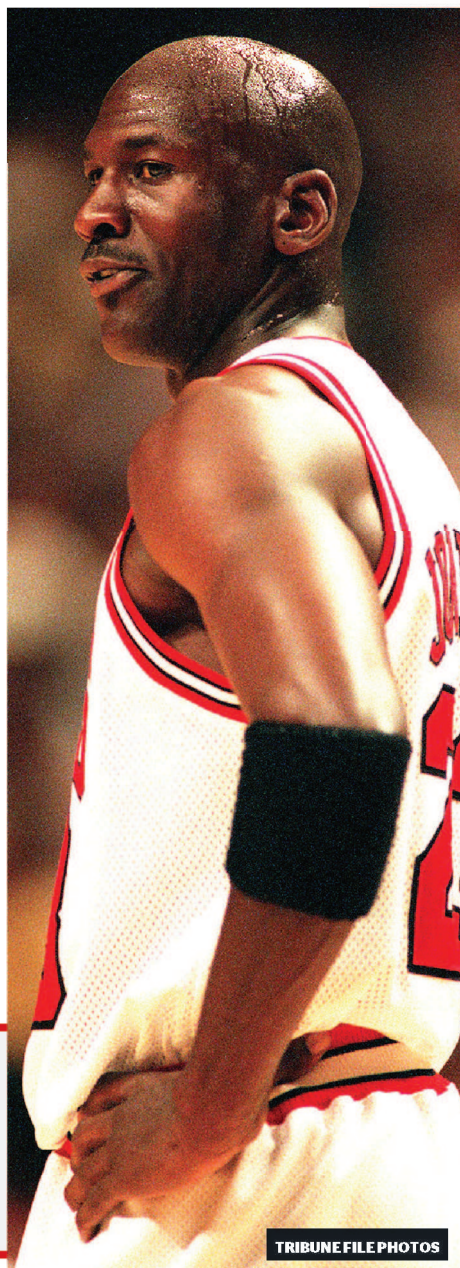

Boom-shaka-laka! There's a lot of excitement in store for Tuesday, when the first "NBA Jam" video game in more than a decade comes to the Nintendo Wii in all its cartoonish, over-the-top glory. For the Bulls, the final roster for "Jam" (based on fan voting) includes current players Derrick Rose, Luol Deng, Carlos Boozer and Joakim Noah. As a bonus, EA Sports tossed in Scottie Pippen and Dennis Rodman, who appear as the franchise's "Legend" players.

We look forward to pulling off somersault dunks with D-Rose and Co., but RedEye made a list of Bulls old and current we'd most like to see in a sequel:

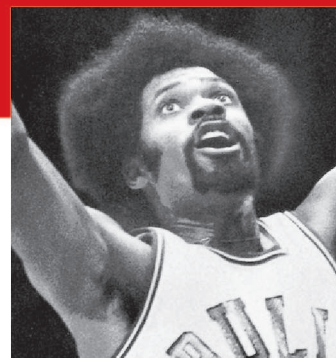

Michael Jordan

Obviously. His Airness was like a real-life version of "NBA Jam," so he'd be the perfect legend to represent the Bulls. To be fair, Jordan always has been stingy about his video game appearances and was a conspicuous no-show in the original "Jam." He also has an entire game to himself ("NBA 2K11") coming out this month.

Artis Gilmore

This old-school center could dunk with the best of them, but we'll admit it: We're putting him on this list based as much on his looks as his game. Gilmore's giant 1970s afro and creative facial hair deserve the video game treatment.

Taj Gibson

This exciting second-year forward certainly has the hops. His killer crossover dribble with accompanying windmill dunk in Chris Kaman's face last season seemed lifted straight from the video game.

Toni Kukoc

Rodman's great to use for banging the boards, but The Waiter is a great all-around player who can shoot from almost anywhere, pass and grab a few rebounds. Just don't tell Scottie you might pick Toni to take the final shot.

Kyle Korver

OK, hear us out. "NBA Jam" traditionally has rewarded teams that use one high-flying dunker and one 3-point specialist. If you can stand looking at his pretty-boy haircut, Korver has the long-range skills to be useful in the game.

Best answer here is the Cubs. But don't tear down Wrigley, just ship the Cubs to Siberia.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redevechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7-letter words get a 50-point bonus. "Blanks" used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 4th Edition. Find the answer at redevechicago.com/puzzles.

Stop hyperventilating. That's so Muggle of you. Instead, show your excitement for the upcoming "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 1" (48 days and counting!) by doing what all the would-be Gryffindor kids are doing. Which is, um, spending time poring over supercool Potter fan sites, such as the-leaky-cauldron.org and mugglenet.com.

The movie, which covers the first half of the seventh and final Potter book, comes out Nov. 19 in 2-D, 3-D and IMAX. With the release just seven weeks away, bits of info are being leaked about what's in store for viewers of this epic finale. A spooky new trailer dropped this week, new interviews with the cast are out and notoriously interview-shy author J.K. Rowling even called on Oprah.

Since we don't have a time-turner or access to a pensieve, we've had to cobble together from these sources some ideas of what we can expect in "HP7:1." But don't worry, there are no spoilers here for anyone who has read the books. ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

'Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows'
WARNER BROS.

POTTERMONIUM!

IT'S BLOODY

Warner Bros. released three new movie posters (one each for Harry, Ron and Hermione) this week and—Merlin's beard!—are those blood splatters on the bottom? Probably, since a special cover of the November Total Film magazine also features a brooding, bleeding Tom "Draco Malfoy" Felton.

IT'S HILARIOUS

Everything in this movie, from its "Deathly Hallows" title to a hard-core fight between Ron and Harry, is uber-dramatic. We're happy, then, that there's an LOL scene in which our hero has to deal with the neuroses of six other Harrys.

DUMBLEDORE'S BACK

Sure, he died at the end of "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince," but hold your hippogriffs: Wizards never truly leave us. The trailer shows Voldemort eerily opening Dumbledore's tomb—plus other shots of the headmaster having a ghostly hand in matters of the living.

THE WAR AFFECTS THE MUGGLE WORLD

In a bizarro world of Avada Kedavra death curses and polyjuice potion, it's easy to forget that Harry is saving the whole world, not just the magical realm. So in the trailer, it's jarring to see him standing next to the Gap.

VOLDEMORT STILL HAS NO NOSE

This isn't surprising, but He-Who-Shall-Not-Be-Named still is He-Who-Probably-Cannot-Smell.
